The Zoning Hearing Board elected John Howard to serve as Chairman, and Rebecca Denlinger as Vice Chair. David Schreder was again chosen to serve as Chairman of the Planning Commission, as was Jim Nagle as Vice Chair. Carol Good was elected as Chair for the Park and Recreation Board, and Suzanne Ranck chosen as Vice Chair.

The schedule of board and commission meetings is available at the township office and is listed also on the township's website. All meetings are open to the public and the public is encouraged to attend. Any person with a disability requiring a special accommodation to attend this public hearing or any Township meeting should notify the Township Office at (717) 464-3731 prior to the meeting. The Township will make every effort to provide a reasonable accommodation.

VOLUNTEERS NEEDED!

Opportunities to volunteer are now available to assist with township stormwater projects. If you are interested in any activities, please contact Kara Kalupson, Stormwater Coordinator, for more information at (717) 464-8019 or email her at kara@westlampeter.com.

Stream Clean-Up

Saturday, April 16th from 8am -12noon

Volunteers are welcome to help Township staff and Millersville students for a clean-up on a one-mile stretch of the Mill Creek between Eshelman Mill Road and Lampeter Road.

Planting Trees

The Township is planning to plant approximately 300 bare root tree seedlings at Heatherfield Park this spring. The trees will be delivered based on weather conditions in the spring, so no date has been set yet for this event. This is a great family-friendly activity and we look forward to having plenty of volunteers.

HARRISBURG HAPPENINGS

Pennsylvania Can't Tax Its Way to Prosperity

“Will the Legislature raise the state sales tax?”

“Will the sales tax be expanded to nursing home care, home health care, legal services, college textbooks, advertising, diapers, over-the-counter drugs, candy, gum, and more?”

These are on my list of “most frequently asked questions” from the past year.

The concern is understandable. Governor Tom Wolf, in his first proposed budget, called for billions in new taxes, including a higher and broader sales tax.

State Senator
Lloyd K. Smucker

The governor's insistence on multi-billion-dollar spending increases and tax hikes lies at the core of his three vetoes and a still-unfinished budget. Unable to secure even one House vote for higher taxes, Governor Wolf has thrust the Commonwealth into a state of fiscal paralysis. His spending plan also did not attract the public support he expected.

History shows that tax hikes not only hurt consumers, but job-creators and the economy, in both the short-term and the long run.

After a slow recovery from the recession, unemployment today is at a healthy five percent. But a tax on previously exempted goods and services could erode demand and kill jobs.

Even without higher tax rates, revenue collections are rising. Total revenue for 2015-16 is 2.6 percent higher than it was through Dec. 2014. Year-to-date sales and use tax collections are 2.9 percent ahead. Personal income tax collections were up 4.6 percent. These totals illustrate that economic growth in the Commonwealth increases revenue without raising taxes.

Predictions of weak economic growth in the next few years are leading other states to spend cautiously, stockpile funds, and delay the launch of ambitious, expensive new programs. Pennsylvania should also move cautiously in order to protect and prolong our recovery.

Moreover, it is irresponsible to take more money from the purses and pockets of Pennsylvanians without addressing the reasons for escalating costs, such as pensions. Without public pension reform, retirement obligations for state workers and school employees will continue to devour any new dollars invested in education, degrade the state's bond rating, and cause property tax increases.

According to the nonpartisan Tax Foundation, Pennsylvania's state-local tax burden ranks 15th highest among the 50 states, averaging 10.2 percent of their income. Taxes paid to Pennsylvania per capita average $3,385 annually.

This year Pennsylvania finally phased out the onerous Capital Stock and Franchise Tax, which dates back to 1844. This tax on corporations was completely eliminated in an effort to provide a more favorable business tax environment, and to stimulate the economy and job growth.

HARRISBURG HAPPENINGS

STATE BUDGET UPDATE

On Dec. 29, 2015, Gov. Tom Wolf signed a state budget. The $30.26 billion spending plan passed by the House and Senate funds the core functions of government and increases funding for preK-12 education by more than $400 million. While the budget would require some new revenue, it would not require broad-based increases in state income or sales taxes.

Instead of signing this budget outright, Wolf cut approximately $6 billion in funding for various programs and services, attempting to leave the door open for the higher spending and higher taxes he wants.

Adopting the annual budget is one of the most basic and important duties lawmakers and the governor face each year. It is extremely frustrating to me that it was six months late, though it was not for the lack of trying on the part of the Legislature.

From day one, the governor has been pushing hard for significant increases in spending and taxes...to levels far beyond what most people can afford. Despite multiple votes that have demonstrated a lack of legislative support for his tax proposals, the governor repeatedly rejected alternative spending plans we sent his way, leaving schools and social services agencies struggling to keep their doors open.

The governor's signing of the budget brought some good news with a release of much-needed funding to those organizations. But he cut the education funding appropriation in half and eliminated some other valuable line items to keep the door open for his tax hikes in continued negotiations.

I am frequently asked why we have been unable to reach an agreement on the budget, so let me share a little bit about what has happened over the last several months and how we have gotten here.

March 3, 2015 - Wolf presents his first budget proposal to a joint session of the General Assembly, calling for a nearly $5 billion increase in spending and a $12.7 billion tax increase over the next two fiscal years.

June 1, 2015 - The governor's tax proposal, which includes a 21 percent increase in the state Personal Income Tax, a 10 percent increase in the Sales and Use Tax rate and an expansion of the sales tax to many products and services not currently taxed, is brought up for a vote in the House and is unanimously rejected. Not one member of either political party supports the plan.

June 30, 2015 - The General Assembly sends a balanced, no-tax-increase budget to the governor that provides the highest level of state funding for education in Pennsylvania history. About two-thirds of the line items in the budget are funded at the same level or even higher than the governor's initial proposal. But within hours of the bill passing the Legislature, the governor vetoes the ENTIRE bill. The governor's full budget veto means the state has no legal authority to spend money.

Aug. 25, 2015 - With little progress made toward a budget agreement, the House attempts veto overrides of several line items in the budget, the vast majority of which either match or exceed the governor's request. Veto overrides require a bipartisan two-thirds vote. Every House Democrat votes "no," and the overrides fail.

Sept. 24, 2015 - The state House passes an emergency funding bill to release money for schools and human service agencies. On Sept. 29, the governor vetoes the bill.

Oct. 7, 2015 - Gov. Wolf's revised tax plan, which includes a 16 percent increase in the income tax rate, is rejected in the House by a vote of 73-127.

WEST LAMPETER TOWNSHIP POLICE NEWS

NEW UNIFORMS FOR OFFICERS

If you look closely at our West Lampeter Township Officers, you may notice that they have changed their uniforms. Since the end of December, the Department has been phasing in the new uniforms. The new uniforms will be a solid gray shirt with black pants. The shirts will have the officer's name embroidered on as well as a badge patch (as opposed to the metal badge and metal name plate). The black pants have cargo-style pockets, which will enable the officer to carry some extra equipment (flashlight, tourniquet, keys, etc.) during routine patrol. These pants are cut differently, with a more relaxed fit. Additionally, the officers will now be wearing a nylon duty belt with nylon duty equipment, as opposed to the leather belt and leather equipment. The nylon duty belt will be lighter and less expensive than the leather gear. The conversion to the new uniform was done for practicality reasons. The new uniforms, along with a more relaxed fit, are better suited for patrol purposes.

Officer Evan Shubrooks wearing the new uniform.

The previous uniforms will still be in service. The shirts (with the black epaulets and black pocket covers, metal badge and name plate), gray pants (with the piping sewn on the outer seam) and leather duty gear will be the Department's 'Class A' uniform and will be worn during special events.

The West Lampeter Township Police Department would like to thank the "Friends of the Force" for kindly paying for the transition to the new uniform and duty gear.

TRASH & RECYCLING

WHY HASN'T MY TRASH BEEN PICKED UP?! GRRR!

Due to the historic blizzard, Penn Waste was forced to cancel their collection of trash and recycling during the final week of January. Remaining snow and ice on the roads created conditions that were simply too hazardous for Penn Waste personnel. Unfortunately, many residents were unaware of the cancellation and expected Penn Waste to collect their trash and recycled items. The good news is that there are several ways to stay informed when it comes to changes in the collection schedule:

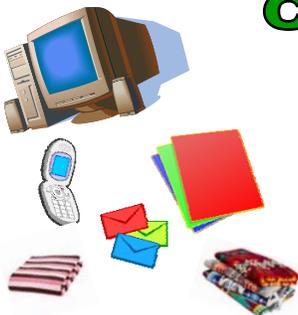

1. The Penn Waste web site is well organized and promptly posts notifications of changes in their collection schedules. The full 2016 trash and recycling schedule is also posted on their web site. <http://www.pennwaste.com/municipalities/west-lampeter-township>
2. West Lampeter Township routinely posts information on its Facebook page related to trash and recycling, including the notification that collection would be cancelled after the blizzard. <https://www.facebook.com/West-Lampeter-Township-1462685037382896/?fref=ts>
3. West Lampeter Township's web site offers a variety of information related to trash and recycling, including: the items accepted for recycling, the dates on which yard waste and leaves are collected, and the dates and times of the township's Community Recycling Events. <http://www.westlampeter.com/2203/Trash-Recycling>

NOTE: For those who don't use a computer, the township also uses the telephone messaging (464-3731) for after hours calls (or if all lines are busy during the day) to provide important information on any changes to the collection schedule.

Eliminating taxes in one area, but hiking them in others, is not a recipe for a robust economy. The state budget has already grown far faster than the rate of inflation – ballooning by about 35 percent in the past 15 years. Now is the time to limit spending growth and tax growth. We cannot tax and spend our way to prosperity.

December 2015 - The House (on Dec. 8) and the Senate (on Dec. 23) approve a $30.26 billion budget that supports the core functions of government and increases education funding by more than $400 million. The governor signed this budget but vetoes several line items on Dec. 29. The combined amount of state and federal funding in place is now 87 percent and money starts flowing to schools and human service agencies.

STORMWATER CORNER

MAINTAINING A STORM WATER DETENTION BASIN

Stormwater management facilities are designed to minimize flooding. They protect against property damage and protect water quality. If a stormwater management facility is located on your property, then you must maintain it in good working condition.

What is a detention basin? Detention basins provide temporary storage for stormwater runoff from upstream areas. They are designed to drain within 24 hours after a storm ends. If water is present after 3 days, it needs maintenance.

How does water get into the basin? Stormwater flows into a basin through a series of stormwater inlets and pipes, or can flow naturally over-ground.

How does water drain out of a basin? A single outlet pipe typically conveys stormwater downstream. A trash rack may be bolted to the headwall to prevent large debris from clogging the pipe. For larger basins, a concrete outlet structure is attached to the outlet pipe. An emergency spillway is also constructed at the top of the basin embankment to discharge larger amounts of stormwater.

Where does the water go? Once stormwater is discharged through the pipe, it should flow into a stream, stabilized swale, or be spread out in a manner so as not to cause excessive erosion downstream. A rock (rip-rap) apron or rock-lined level spreader is frequently installed to protect the soil surface from excessive erosion.

How do I maintain my detention basin? Detention basins and all associated structures should be inspected at least four times per year, as well as after every storm greater than one inch. Common areas of impairment include clogging, bare spots in the vegetation, and excessive debris and sediment accumulation.

Detention basins must be kept free of all structures. During storm events, these structures can become dislodged, block the flow of water, and cause property damage upstream and downstream.

If accumulated sediment is preventing drainage, then the sediment should be removed. The disturbed area must be seeded and stabilized immediately so that new vegetation will protect the soil surface from erosion.

Mowing and/or trimming of vegetation should be performed as necessary to sustain proper function of the basin. All trash and debris must be removed in a timely manner.

All bare spots should be re-seeded, stabilized, and covered with vegetation in order to protect the soil surface and minimize erosion.

Basins must be kept free of all permanent and temporary structures.

Accumulated sediment creates ponding problems

Bare areas should be re-seeded / stabilized with rock (rip-rap).

COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT DEPARTMENT

Pennsylvanians Urged to Test Homes for Radon

The Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) is urging all Pennsylvanians to test their homes for radon, a deadly radioactive gas that's the leading cause of lung cancer in non-smokers in the United States. Winter is the best time to test your home for radon because doors and windows are typically closed and tightly sealed, producing the most accurate results. The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency sets the "action level" for radon at 4 picocuries per liter (pCi/L) of air. Residents with levels at or above that figure should take steps to lower them.

Testing for radon is the only way to know if a home, school, workplace or other structure has elevated concentrations of radon. Test kits can be purchased at most hardware or home improvement stores at an average cost of $15 to $25 per test. If you are uncomfortable doing the testing yourself you can hire a state-certified radon tester, or if you are selling your home and want a radon test, it is best to hire a certified tester. The cost of a mitigation system typically ranges around $1,000.

Pennsylvania law requires all radon service providers, such as radon testers, radon mitigators and radon laboratories to be certified by DEP. The list of Pennsylvania-certified radon service providers is updated monthly and available on DEP's website. You can also obtain a hard copy of the directory or verify a company's certification by calling 800-23RADON.

If you are building a new home, DEP recommends installing a passive radon system during construction. If high radon levels are found when the home is completed, a fan can be readily installed. There are good reasons to install a radon system during construction:

- There is no reliable way to test the ground in advance for radon.
- The average residential radon level in Pennsylvania is 7-8 picocuries per liter.
- The cost of installing the radon system during construction should be less than installing one after the fact.
- Building the radon system internally should keep aesthetics of the home intact. If radon is not addressed during construction, an outside radon system may be required if the radon test comes back greater than 4 picocuries per liter.

For people buying or selling a home, Pennsylvania's Real Estate Seller Disclosure Act requires sellers to disclose the results of any known radon testing. DEP's website lists radon testing options for real estate transactions

For more information about radon testing and radon resistant construction, visit DEP's website at www.dep.pa.gov/radon.
